Poets have communed with the mysterious forces that cling to the island Cos, and those forces have eased the psychic pain of those poets and their friends in return. You, too, can ask for such a blessing, either for yourself or for a suffering companion. Simply approach the shrine with a newly composed poem of at least 17 syllables that somehow discusses one of the sufferer's deepest secrets. Write that poem on the page above. Now, if the island favors you, the sufferer will be healed, at least to some extent . . .

After writing the poem, roll a D20. If your roll is at least 10, then the sufferer gains 1 psychic health point. If your roll is at least 20, then the sufferer gains 2 psychic health points, and their psychic health max also increases by 1, to a max of 7. If you roll a 1, then the sufferer loses 1 psychic health point.

Each poet can write up to five poems here.

A Hastily Scrawled Note

Gods, forgive me. I've already failed. I can feel my flesh rotting beneath my skin even as I write these words, corrupted by the foul kiss of poison. I know now that I am doomed, though I can only guess at the identities of those responsible. I suspect that I will die before the sun sets, and I fear this wedding, too, will end in bloodshed and strife. Please, for my sake, for the sake of peace, in the name of all the gods of Olympus, do not let my death turn you against each other. Do not let rage consume your reason, lest the wrath of divine prophecy tear all our nations asunder. Please, know that I would have your nations be brothers once more, not bitter rivals. Know that I would have done everything in my power to prevent war. Know that I would have at least tried. I beg of you to do the same. I am sorry...

An Open Letter

Sirasu Noon,

As the chief diplomat of the Assyrian Dominion, there are several facts you ought to be apprised of before you arrive at the royal wedding - potential points of contention that you should be prepared to defuse if tensions escalate. An Etruscan merchant of no small wealth named Paldeen has unearthed the ancient Diadem of the Sabines, and plans to sell it to one of the nations in attendance; the treasuries of Scythia and Etruria will doubtless vie for such a prize. Moreover, if worst comes to worst, both rulers have brought with them devices for communicating with their armies. With these communicators, they have the ability to ignite a vicious war such as the Sabine nations have never before seen. These are sophisticated magical devices with several keys. Our intelligence has been able to determine that the number pressed dictates the intensity of the attack. Pressing the key marked "0" should convey no military order; higher numbers command subsequently more aggressive courses of action. Of course, I pray the wedding goes smoothly, and that neither side resorts to such desperate measures. But the knowledge is available to you should you require it.

May Jove smile upon you, may your words be heeded by all, and may peace be the will of the gods.

Sincerely, The Secretary-Consul of Assyria

Kitchen Door

Through a porthole-like window in the kitchen door, you see a burly cook scuttling about in a cloud of steam, attending to bubbling pots and pans in ovens and on magical, flameless grills. He will not willingly let you into the kitchen.

To stealthily enter the kitchen, roll a d20. If you rolled at least 12, you succeed in evading the cook's notice for 5 minutes; look at the page underneath this. Otherwise, the cook gives you a stern talking-to and kicks you out, and you cannot attempt to re-enter for 20 minutes. If you see someone besides the cook inside, you can alert the cook to the intruder's presence.

Kitchen

To examine the food being prepared, look in the envelope. You cannot eat the food while it is still in the kitchen, nor can you bring items from outside and hide them in the kitchen. You can however steal food from the kitchen. After placing your hand on this sign for 30 seconds, randomly pick one item from the envelope; you can put this item back or take it with you from the kitchen. This is an interruptible mechanic.

If you dawdle here for more than 5 minutes, or if someone else alerts the cook to your presence, the cook throws you out, and you cannot attempt to re-enter for 20 minutes.

Please do not remove this until April 24th, 2016.

Broom Closet

An unassuming broom closet. The closet is locked, and unstashable items can be stored here. There are two ways to gain entrance to this space:

1. Hit the lock with a CR of 8 or greater.
2. Pick the lock. This space has a lock difficulty of 10.

Once you have completed one of the above requirements, put your hand on this sign for 2 minutes. Afterwards, you may access the items inside.

Please do not remove this until April 24th, 2016.

Riddle

Your wits are the key to this door. A riddle suddenly pops into your head; you may not discuss the riddle or its answer with anyone else:

An iron horse with a flaxen tail.

*The faster the horse runs,
the shorter his tail becomes.*

What is it?
