Charging Machine

This is a complicated machine with a potion bubbling inside. The potion will be done 2 hours after game starts.

You can add external power sources to this machine by putting items marked "power source" in the envelope below. Phylacteries cannot be used as power sources for this purpose, as they are not compatible with the machine.

To examine the power sources currently attached to the machine, spend thirty seconds touching this sign. You can then access the envelope and look at its contents. If you want to add or remove a power source, spend an additional fifteen seconds tinkering with the machine. This process allows you to add or remove a single power source.

There are no other ways to alter the machine. Its inner mechanisms are protected by solid steel shielding and are therefore inaccessible. The machine cannot be moved during game. This is a kludge.

Queen of the Pixies

Here sits the queen of the pixies, a blue wizened creature the size of a human fist. She does not produce pixie dust any longer. Instead, she sits on a throne of physical objects that her subjects have collected at some point. If you spend thirty seconds complimenting her, she will permit you to examine her throne.

To examine the throne, look through the items in the envelope below. This process only represents looking at the items. If an item is itself represented by an envelope, do not look inside that envelope— you do not experience any touch-based magical effects from the throne's items.

If the throne strikes your fancy, the queen will allow you to take a single item with you. If you take an item represented by an envelope, you must now open the envelope and be affected by any touch-based effects.

You may not add items to the queen's throne.
